Equity in Action in R-H: Culturally Responsive-Sustaining (CR-S) Education Framework

Please join us for a district and community conversation regarding the New York State Education Department Culturally Responsive-Sustaining (CR-S) Education Framework and how Rush-Henrietta is incorporating it into district practices. There are two sessions available—please register for the one that fits your schedule. Each session will consist of an introduction to the framework, some ways in which Rush-Henrietta is implementing it, and Q & A.

Interested community-members also have the opportunity to participate in a book study of “Culturally Responsive Teaching and the Brain,” by Zaretta Hammond. Further information about this will be shared at our Community Conversations.
